OF INTEREST TO WOMEN.

LITTLE PROBLEMS OF LOVE AND MARRIAGE

Is the Man Who Is Easily Attracted Likely to Prove Constant?

Nearly every social circle knows the man who is attracted in turn by every pretty newcomer who enters it. He is attentive to Anne until Sue appears. Sue has his devotion until Clara arrives, and so on. One could scarcely hope that such a man would prove constant as a husband, though he might never be more than a harmless flirt.

With some men such changing allegiance is no more than an unwearied search for the right one. But this is working rather hard for an excuse. Generally speaking, a man of this stamp has a fickle fancy. He soon tires. His devotion is rarely of the constant order and a woman would find it hard to hold him.

The test of such a man is after all character. If he is one of the unsteady sort who drifts from one thing to another in other matters, it is pretty safe to conclude that this fickleness permeates his whole character and he will be very unsafe to trust in serious affairs. But if he is steadfast and loyal in his friendships with men and in his business relations, this flitting from one girl to another in his attentions simply shows that he has as yet but a passing interest in all. No girl has touched the depths of his nature. When this sort of man is once thoroughly attracted, he is apt to be quite as constant if not more so than the man who hasn't shown this roving disposition. He will have had his experience, he will know girls pretty well, and the fact that he has at last decided shows that he has found the one who fully satisfies his rather fastidious tastes.

When a man of this sort begins to pay attention to a girl, she should study his character carefully before she takes his attentions seriously. If he shows he is a fickle wanderer from one flower to another, she should value his present attentions for what they are worth. But if his character denotes he can be in earnest when he thinks it worth while, it is up to her to decide whether she cares to make it worth while or not.

BARBARA BOYD.

MORNING CHIT-CHAT.

IF all the children of this decade could be thoroughly grounded in the answer to the question, "When is a joke not a joke?" I think that rowdism and vandalism in the next decade would probably decrease considerably.

A few months ago I believe I chronicled a case, where a bride and groom were tipped out of their carriage and the groom's arm broken because some young people thought it funny to tie white ribbons on the spirited horses.

To-day's case is that of another couple in Chicago, a bride and groom of a few hours, who left their flat to escape the visitations of their hilarious friends, spent the night at a hotel and returned to find that the intruders—several of them girls—had upset all the furniture and piled the chairs, plates, pictures, and other goods in a heap on the floor.

Doubtless these "friends" thought they had done an exquisitely funny thing.

Doubtless when they were children they were never impressed with the fact that anything that infers property or causes pain has not the slightest element of humor in it.

Does your child thoroughly grasp that fact? If not, can't you assist him to?

There is a certain exasperating class of persons for whom I have been sharpening my pencil—or to speak more modernly—warming up my typewriter for some time. And that is the people who ask you questions and never wait for an answer.

I don't mean the impatient kind who pour forth four or five questions in their eagerness before they wait to hear the answer.

Indeed, I love the way in which Rosalind, when she hears that Orlando is near, bursts forth—

"Alas, the day! What shall I do with my doublet and hose? What did he when thou sawest him? What said he? How looked he? Wherein went he? What makes he here? Did he ask for me? Where remains he? How parted he with thee? And when shall thou see him again? Answer me in one word!"

But the person I mean is he or she—I think it is more apt to be a she—who always tries to make herself agreeable by asking you how your work is getting on, or some such kindly question, and then either completely forgets to wait for the answer, or listens with such a vacant stare that you know she hears nothing of what you are saying.

The habit is the result of the eternal desire to seem without making the effort to be, the desire to get the reputation and the popularity that comes from being interested in other people without the unselfishness to be really interested in others.

And like all attempts to seem without being, it is readily seen through, and produces exactly the opposite result from the one desired.

RUTH CAMERON.

BEING A BRIDESMAID.

From the Philadelphia Bulletin.

Of course it is a delightful compliment to be asked to take a prominent part in that pretty pageant, a wedding, but the popular girl invited to officiate as bridesmaid more than the proverbial "three times and out" finds such functions a drain on her financial resources.

Each bride wants her wedding to be "unique" in some particular and likes her bridesmaids' gowns to be exclusive. She decides upon some rather unusual color scheme, and there must be a general likeness between the costumes. Even if all wear white, the various accessories, ribbons, gloves, slippers, hose, hat, very likely, and the "extra touch" of fancy mud or bow, brings the expense to a considerable total.

It is not very often that the bride gives the dress or hat, though she often tries to make the expense commensurate with the means of her friends. She often suggests a dressmaker who will reduce her prices a little in consideration of the number of gowns to be made practically alike.

One girl who expected to take part in several bridal processions bought a new gown for the first occasion. It was very fine white batiste. Instead of wearing it she laid it aside. Yellow was the color for a chrysanthemum wedding in November. She bought cheap yellow silk for a princess suit to wear under it, and matching accessories and a great sheaf of yellow "noons" attended as maid at a quiet home affair.

"The next wedding was a mauve one, and she sent her white gown to the dyers. This she wore over a white slip. It took a slightly paler tint than was desired, and in consequence was less satisfactory. The next wedding was on the "rainbow" order, the bride wearing white, the four maids being gowned in pale pink, blue, lemon yellow, and mauve. With violet and violet wreathed hat which she made for herself, and the previously worn accessories, she made the once white gown do duty again. The expense of the four functions was, to her, nearly $70, after all her ingenuity.

Almond Milk Soup.

Blanch one-half pound of almonds and brown in the oven; while crisp and hot mash to a powder with a rolling pin. Scald one quart of milk; add a tablespoonful of flour and the almonds. Cook five minutes, add a teaspoonful of salt and a dash of cayenne and serve hot with croutons.

"Picking Up."

From the Chicago Record-Herald.

"How's your wife?" asked the sparrow. "Oh, she's pickin' up," replied the bluejay.

Washing Fluid.

A good washing fluid is made of one box of lye, one ounce of liquid ammonia, and one tablespoonful of salts of soda.

Macaroons should never be thrown away when not used, as they may be crushed and used to flavor custards, puddings, and ice cream.

SPRING GOODS LOOK WINTRY.

From the Philadelphia Star.

Some of the spring clothes have a far more wintrylike appearance than anything offered in years past for this purpose.

Diagonals of seemingly ribbed cloths, which belong to that old style known as "mixtures," are again to the fore.

Another old style of flecked mixtures is quite as numerous. The groundwork of these cloths is fully two shades lighter than the surface design.

In wood colors and grays of different tones, in blues and tawny colors, where white often enters into the mixture, the effect is less heavy.

Cloth of this description requires little or no trimming, so it is turned out in good and severe tail lines, without any exaggerations of collar-cuffs, pockets, or buttons.

Quite in the original early tailor-made simplicity, one at once pictures the woman who will wear them selecting straw turbans of a less voluminous crown, or quite little straw hats having narrow turned down brims, the crowns either silk or ribbon trimmed.

Anything fantastic or laden with flower-garlands in the way of headgear would look absurd.

A few fairs, however, that the sense of fitness between hats and costumes for street wear has been so utterly destroyed by the monstrosities of the past years that a sudden change to sanity and harmony will not be as general as is desirable.

Angelica Cream.

From Harper's Bazar.

Angelica cream is delicious and novel. Whip half a pint of cream quite thick, sweeten with two tablespoonfuls of confectioners' sugar, add one stiffly beaten egg white, one-quarter pound of fresh marshmallows, cut in halves, two tablespoonfuls of chopped English walnuts, about two inches of angelica stem cut very thin, and half a teaspoonful of vanilla. Mix lightly and pile up heart-shaped on the split halves of uniced cake, cakes, made as directed below. Or, if preferred, white hearts of thin slices of angel cream can be used for this foundation. Place a marshmallow cherry in the very center, pierce with candy (or gilt paper) arrow, and at the last moment before serving surround with the cherry liquid boiled down with enough sugar to make a thick syrup. This serves eight.

Coat gowns are to continue popular.

FROM WOMAN'S POINT OF VIEW

What a gift is fact! I have always said that, but the truth of the statement was brought home to me anew a short time ago, when a popular young woman undertook a social function of considerable magnitude. She did not want to hurt any of her close friends feelings, so she pressed them into service, and left all of them in ignorance of their duties.

They were simply asked to assist wherever she wanted assistance, and one and all readily agreed. That the affair passed off successfully and with no wounded feelings is a tribute to the cleverness of the hostess, for one must believe that there were all kinds of dispositions with which to deal. I think it is the only social function where no neighbor was slighted that I have ever known, and I know that the presence of each was wanted, that the invitations were heart-felt rather than a matter of courtesy.

It is not easy to steer clear of trouble, even with care, for there are little acts of omission which leave stings that are never soothed. A call that slips the mind and is not returned, an unacknowledged gift, an unrequited attention, a broken promise—one and all of these things are happening every day, and the mischief caused may not be known till long afterward. Possibly it is too much to expect humanity to avoid slips; but need there be so many of them?

Calls should be registered, that they may not be overlooked. Letters should be answered before they get "cold." If they are answered at all, gifts should be immediately acknowledged and obligations discharged so soon that they cannot be forgotten. As for promises—well, I feel rather strongly on that subject, because I learned a lesson long ago and never forgot it. Promises should not be made without due consideration, but, being made, nothing less than sickness or death should be allowed to interfere with the keeping of them. Certainly trivial excuses and forgetfulness are unpardonable.

I have wasted hours on women who probably had no intention of redeeming their promises, but not many hours on one woman. I never permitted an experience to be repeated with the same woman as the culprit, and because I could not depend upon them, I have had to cut several otherwise delightful women out of my scheme of life. I have no time to waste, and I need my entire stock of patience.

Lemon Candy.

Put into a kettle three and one-half pounds of sugar, and one-half pint of water, and one teaspoonful of cream of tartar. Let it boil until it becomes brittle when dropped in cold water; when sufficiently done take off the fire and pour in a shallow dish which has been greased with a little butter. When this has cooled so that it can be handled add teaspoonful of tartaric acid and the same quantity of extract of lemon and work them into the mass. The acid must be fine and free from lumps. Work this in as it will tend to destroy the transparency of the candy. This method may be used for preparing all other candies, as pineapple, etc., using different flavors.

WASHINGTON HERALD BUREAU, 625 King Street.

Alexandria, Va., Feb. 14.—Plans for the celebration of Washington's Birthday by Alexandria-Washington Lodge, No. 22, were announced to-day by C. H. Callahan, worshipful master of the lodge. At this celebration will be organized a national memorial association, for the purpose of erecting a Masonic memorial in the shape of a handsome temple to "Washington, the Mason."

The affair will be concluded with the annual banquet at Armory Hall. Those who will respond to toasts are: Representative Champ Clark, Missouri; Secretary of War Dickinson, Gov. William Hodges Mann, of Virginia; Representative C. C. Carlin, this city; James D. Richardson, Tennessee, and Rev. John Wesley Hill, D. D., New York.

Grand masters representing thirty-five States are expected to be in attendance. The programme follows: At 9:30 a. m., meeting in lodge room to form national organization, presided over by the grand master of Virginia. At 12:30 o'clock an adjournment will be taken for luncheon. The grand masters and special guests, under escort of the grand master of Virginia and a delegation from Alexandria-Washington Lodge, will leave at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon, and place a memorial wreath on the tomb of Washington.

At 4 o'clock there will be conferring of degrees in Illinois form by a degree team, composed of grand lodge officers, grand lecturers, and district deputy grand masters coming from Chicago for that purpose.

Announcement is made that admission to all of these exercises, except special guests, or Alexandria Masons, will be by card only, and no one will be permitted to participate in the formation of the memorial association, or the heads of the supreme Masonic bodies of the country.

The supply of postal card valentines exceed all previous years. To-night the younger generation of the city made merry in distributing valentines of the comic variety.

Mrs. Permelia R. Rotchford's funeral took place at 9:30 o'clock this morning from St. Mary's Catholic Church. Rev. Father L. F. Hanrahan, and M. Ahren.

Judge L. C. Barley, of the Corporation Court, who has written to Gov. Mann about the case of Henry Smith, the negro sentenced to die Friday next for participation in the murder of Walter F. Schultz, among other things, says:

"I believed then, and believe now, that Smith participated in the commission of the crime equally with the others, and therefore know of no extenuating circumstances to justify me in commencing executive clemency in this case, unless it be by reason of Smith's confession and his evidence in the trial of the three others' cases and his assistance to the Commonwealth in helping it to establish its cases against Johnson, Pines, and Dorsey, that it should appeal to you that he has rendered the Commonwealth such great assistance as to merit executive clemency to the extent of commutation of his sentence to life imprisonment."

A fine of $20 was imposed on James Self in the Police Court this morning on the charge of breaking a mirror in the saloon of the Tontine Hotel Saturday night last. The accused had nothing to say in his own defense.

The body of J. Carle Jett, who died in Wilmington, Del., Friday last, was brought here this afternoon and buried in Bethel Cemetery. Rev. W. F. Watson, pastor of the First Baptist Church, conducted the services.

A youth at noon to-day struck Miss Madeline Byrne, daughter of Joseph H. Byrne, in the eye with a snowball, painfully injuring her.

Luther Keith, an employe of the Potomac Railroad yards, had his back badly sprained this morning while at work. Keith was brought to the Alexandria Hospital for treatment.

COL. W. H. LOVE DEAD.

Baltimore Business Man Victim of Apoplectic Stroke.

Baltimore, Feb. 14.—Col. William H. Love, secretary of the board of trade, widely known in the insurance world and one of the authorities on Maryland history, was found dead on the floor of his room at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. N. Slade, at Reisterstown, about 8 o'clock this morning.

Death was due to apoplexy, and had come to him during the early hours of the morning. It is thought that he was awakened early, felt that he was dying, and got out of bed for the purpose of seeking relief from the pain. He was a physician, when he was stricken and toppled to the floor.

Although since suffering a slight stroke of paralysis a year ago Col. Love had been in poor health, his death was unexpected. He was downtown Saturday morning. He went home during the early part of the evening, and yesterday morning he arose as usual. All during the day he was around the house, and not once did he complain of feeling any worse than he had for some time past.

JUSSERAND GIVES AID.

Inquires in France as to Connections of Man Arrested Here.

Ambassador Jusserand yesterday sent inquiries to Paris concerning Henri Cruchet, a Frenchman, supposedly a deacon, who was arrested Saturday night, after he had been gazing at the stars for more than an hour from a spot in Sixteenth, between S and T streets northwest. The police believe Cruchet to be a man of wealth. He says he is an inventor of explosives, mining engineering, an electrical expert. Cruchet is held at the Washington Asylum Hospital.

PRAISE HEROINE OF FIRE.

Occupants of Woodley Inn, Whose Lives Were Saved, Praise Her.

The twenty-five or thirty guests who occupied historic Woodley Inn, located at the northwest corner of Massachusetts avenue and Thirty-eighth street, when it was burned to the ground early Saturday morning, are loud in acclaiming the coolness and heroism displayed by the genial hostess, Mrs. Margaret Forsyth Munday, widow of Surgeon Munday, U. S. A., and daughter of the late Col. Forsyth, U. S. A. They go to the extent of declaring that, but for the bravery of their hostess upon this occasion, many lives would undoubtedly have been lost. An especially noteworthy act on the part of Mrs. Munday was in the case of a Miss Porter, who occupied a room on the second floor, which apartment was practically the nearest to the fire. She led Miss Porter through the dense smoke and dangerous passages to safety.

ASK FOR SETTLING TANKS.

Superintendent of Sewers Fears Damage from Clogging.

To prevent the clogging again of the sewer pipes draining the government's printing plant, Asa Phillips, superintendent of sewers, has suggested to the Commissioners that they advise the Bureau of Engraving and Printing to install a system of settling tanks. A large amount of metallic sediment from inks and chemicals used in the bureau, settles in the District's drain pipes, preventing the free passage of sewage. To remove an accumulation of this substance in 1909, cost the District $69.

PURPOSES ROAD CHANGES.

Bill Just Introduced in Maryland Would Affect Schedules.

If a bill introduced into the Maryland legislature by Delegate J. J. Crowley, becomes a law, important changes affecting the services of the Chesapeake Beach and the Baltimore and Potomac railroads will be made. The bill requires all local trains to make connections at the junctions, allowing sufficient time for passengers to change cars. By the requirements of the bill, it will make it possible for the passengers from Southern Maryland on the Popes Creek line of the Pennsylvania road to reach Washington without going to Bowie to connect. Washington passengers may also reach all parts of Southern Maryland via Chesapeake Beach train, connecting at Chesapeake Junction.

Through and return tickets are required to be sold.
